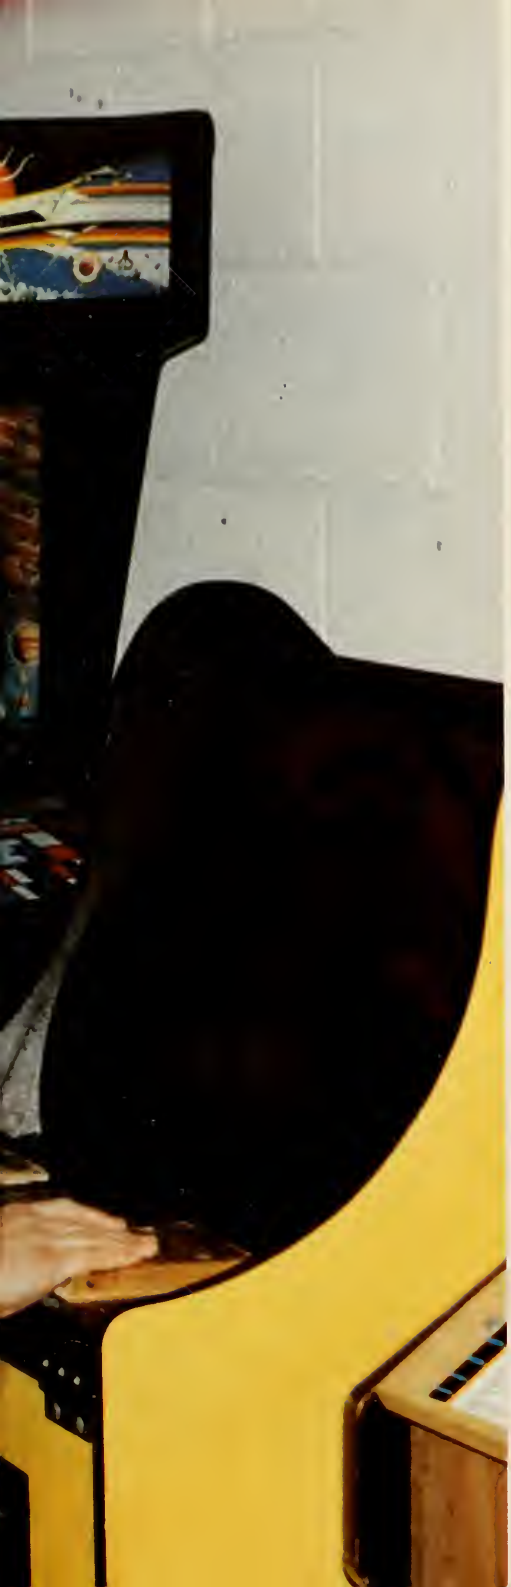
VENTURE
ASTEROID



There are two types of freshmen at Y.U. There are those that choose to attend after graduating from high school, and another contingent that opts for a year in Yeshiva in Israel.

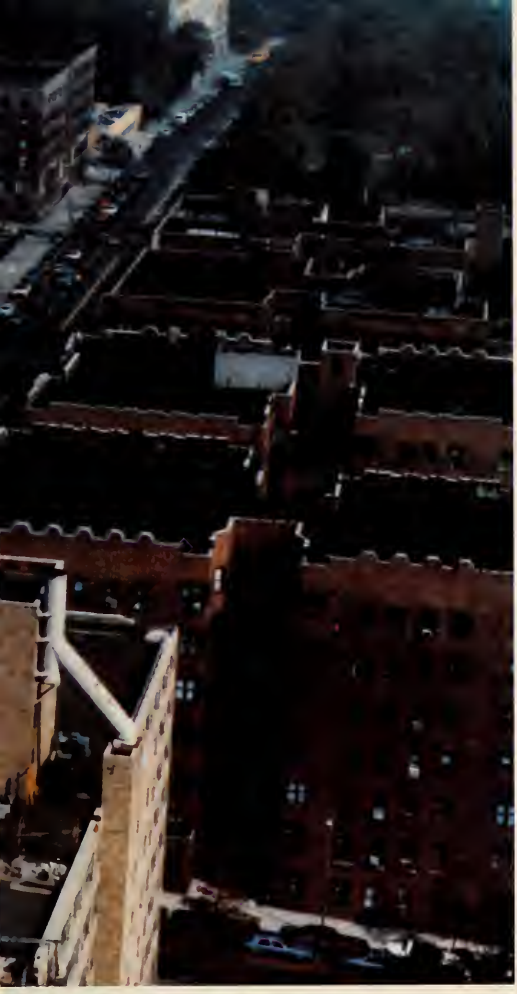
When a freshman enters Yeshiva he steps into a new world replete with its own language. Suddenly words such as "elective," "requirement," "easy A," and "grubbing" become an integral part of his speech. The freshman faces a serious dilemma. There are various facets of college life that he must necessarily balance. Due to the rigors of the double program, he must budget time for as many as ten courses. Yet the television, telephone, and radio look increasingly more inviting than his intro Bio or Eco text. If he is to succeed in college he will have to learn to occasionally lock his door and take the telephone off the hook.

The freshman year is not totally depressing. By the time finals roll around he will probably be amongst a group of friends planning to spend their first grub shabbos together (after the weekend, he does twice the amount of work to make up for the wasted time spent talking about Florida or skiing during intersession).

As the year progresses, he takes part in some extracurricular activities. Perhaps, a governing board member of Commentator or Hamevaser has promised him a governing board position for nothing more than ten hours of typing during midterms.

The freshman year is a time of enormous growth, and in most cases satisfaction. The Yeshiva freshman has more demanded of him than ever before; high school seems like a far away memory. By spring he has developed a good index of his abilities and he knows what to expect from himself and Yeshiva.

The Sophomore class grows to include the Israel returnees. The newcomers must learn the freshman vocabulary and terms such as: "Israel credits evaluation," and "Biblical Exegesis." The Sophomore year becomes the time to look back on the experience of the freshman year, assess performances, and reevaluate goals (not for the last time). One feels obligated to commit one's self to a particular major and career goal but is still hesitant to do so. However, by the end of the year, due to the constraints and pressures of the system, one must compact the next two years of life so as to appropriately schedule Hebrew requirements, summer sciences, Accounting sequences and that ominous and still mysterious concept: Kaplan's.



The Jr. year begins and another 150 students are allowed the pleasure of calling themselves upperclassmen. One is halfway finished; yet the worst is yet to come.

In the lower classman years the student's vision does not seem to extend past 4 years of college. With the outset of the Jr. year, graduation and life after college are now visible on the horizon. Once again, the vocabulary changes. The new vocabulary has a distressing propensity for initials i.e. GMAT, MCAT, LSAT, DAT and the dreaded, hated E.T.S. The word "percentile" also takes an ominous meaning.

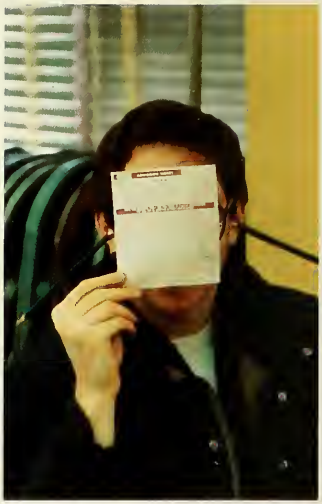
Sometime during the Jr. year and early in the Sr. year, the majority of Yeshiva students will begin a course at Kaplan's and look at those plastics with the owls on them with hatred and depression. In addition to keeping his grades up in school (knowing the Jr. year counts the most with an admissions board,) the student must now fully contend with the pressure that the graduate school entrance system puts on him.

In the first two years, the student placed the pressure on himself. Now he feels it from outside, every time he grades himself at Kaplan's or reads a graduate school brochure. For the most fortunate, this pressure will "only" continue for another 6 to 8 months until the early winter of the session; for others, the pressure of the race will continue into the spring and summer. Unfortunately, for some the pressure will be only alleviated with failure. Such is the rules, rewards and punishments of the climb to graduate school.

Some time between April and October, Kaplan's will become a second home as one feels that they are perpetually wearing headphones. Some students will even learn to drive to Hackensack in their sleep.

With the change in routine comes a parallel change in attitude. The majority of students have decided on a chosen career. On desks in the dorm, the reading material changes. Along with the Sports Illustrated and People are now found the Wall St. Journal and "Barron's Guide to Medical Schools." Instead of Camp or Israel, plans change to taking sciences over the summer or finding a career related internship.

STERN



By the end of the Jr. year most of the people in the Class of 1984 know what their goals are. Now they will find out if they can attain them.

In the senior year the vocabulary has changed again. The new terms include "clinical facilities," "starting salary," "Big 8" and "Investment Banking."

Again the routine changes; most of the senior class has a minimal course load, yet they are very busy. Pre Med and Pre Dent students await interviews or hope they get them. Those going to Business School write out their essays and polish their wing tips. Accounting students hope they get an offer during their call back. In December, Seniors begin calling home every night — not so much to talk to their parents as to find out if any important mail came. The most important college vocabulary word: Fall — acceptance letter.

There is a more pleasant side to the senior year. With less school work to be done, diversions develop. Intramural sports become a major activity, and road trips are a nightly event. When the snow begins to fall, ski trips and late night football become popular.

At the end of the year not every student will be happy with his stay at Yeshiva. Many will have justifiable criticisms; but with college winding down to a conclusion, most students have developed a close set of friends that will remain. Some people call it a chevra, others a clique. Regardless, these friendships are the most valuable thing college provides. The Organic Chemistry and Business law will be forgotten, but the love and friendship will remain.

Ever since the publishing of George Orwell's 1984, the year 1984 has achieved a special meaning. It has come to symbolize a futuristic totalitarian state in which every vestige of Man's mind and spirit is destroyed.

As 1983 drew to a close and 1984 approached, newspapers and magazines printed numerous articles which discussed the accuracy of Orwell's predictions.

Many people feel that our society is out of the reach of 1984. They point to our advanced social structure, and smugly smile about how wrong Orwell was. Perhaps a closer look is in order.

In 1984, Orwell showed how a totalitarian state can control all aspects of life, down to the individual's every thought. Newspeak, the official language of Oceania in 1984, was designed to limit creative thought and eliminate possible "heresy" or "thought-crime." The entire philosophy of the society in 1984 could be expressed in one Newspeak word — "doublethink." This concept explained that it was possible for a person to believe in an obvious contradiction, such as 2+2=5. "War is Peace, Freedom is Slavery, Ignorance is Strength," is an example of the slogans used to condition the citizens of Oceania.

Examples of this type of thinking are present in our society as well. As Russel Baker pointed out, the American war machine is run by a "Defense Department." The deadly MX missile has been nicknamed "The Peacekeeper" by President Reagan. The communist government of East Germany calls itself the German Democratic Republic. The USSR, which also has the audacity to call itself a republic, is itself involved in totalitarian oppression of Jews and other minority groups . . .

GEORGE 1984 ORWELL

This describes the reality of the world around us. When we, as graduates of Yeshiva University enter this world we must take with us the lessons we learned here at Yeshiva.

The past four years at Yeshiva have been preparation for the task ahead of us. During these formative years we have laid the groundwork to make ourselves better individuals. All the hours spent learning in the Beis Midrash, studying in the library, relaxing at extracurricular activities and even grabbing at Kaplan's all have intensified our sense of purpose.

We at Yeshiva have had the best of both worlds. Both a fine college curriculum and superior Judaic studies programs have been made available to us. This dual training, that of both Torah and Maddah, prime us for our dual purpose in the outside world. In addition, we have forged lasting bonds of friendship with our peers and teachers that will help us take the atmosphere of Yeshiva wherever we go.

Orwell questioned democracy's ability to survive in a technologically advanced environment such as ours. Indeed the outlook seems bleak. We as graduates of Yeshiva must take the lessons we have learned here, the sense of purpose honed here, and the previous relationships begun here and use all of these to make a Kiddush Hashem in the world around us, and truly fulfill our role as Jews in our 1984 and beyond.

Freedom, In Two Dimensions

Burned-out Bronx frozen gray
Under a rusting sun, rising
Early late in May.

Breezes flutter, engines sputter,
Black exhaust envelopes
Working classes on the run.
Clear skies trail ivory clouds, gray shadows disappear
— Wonder I, is noon just past or is it yet to come.

Boats of blue and gold are going
Nowhere under silver cables.
Uptown,
A green dome rises, hesitating,
Unsure of its place in time,
And as our last week begins, the sunlight
Melts the last weak links.

We are free now, like the green ivy
Climbing past the open windows,
Free to reach and take hold — yet
Never beyond the one wall on which we first began.
So long ago, so young.

Questions lie awake at night
Awaiting answers not yet found.
There they are! Written on the wall —
But in a foreign tongue.

"Explain!" we cry.
The moon hangs high,
Silent, no translation.
A thousand suns will climb and fall
Before we understand.

Dedication

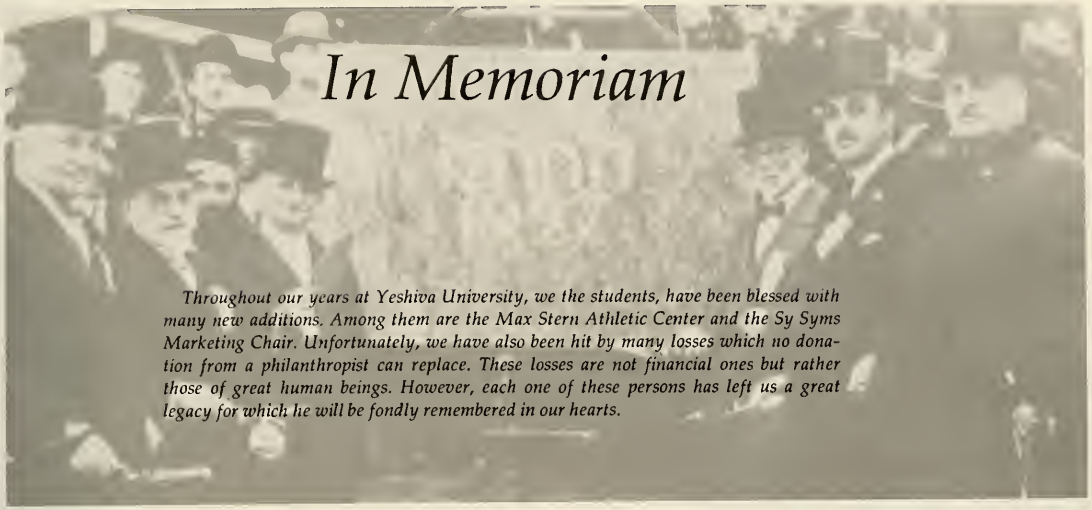
Many of the teachers at Yeshiva are characterized by their tremendous dedication to the University and its students. Dr. Norman Schlessberg is one such individual who merits special recognition.

The first encounter that students have with Dr. Schlessberg can be a bit startling. In the classroom, he is powerful, dynamic, and above all, demanding. No amount of pre-class preparation seems to satisfy him. It is only after some time that students realize and appreciate the deep love that Dr. Schlessberg harbors for Yeshiva University and its students.

Dr. Schlessberg single-handedly created the Accounting program at Yeshiva. Under his able leadership, the program is one of the fastest growing programs at Yeshiva. In addition, he personally coordinates the only on-campus recruiting program, a program with a 100 percent success rate to date. He is constantly running, phoning, and badgering until every one of his "boys and girls" has a job.

In recognition of his dedication to each individual student at Yeshiva, and to the institution as a whole, the Senior class of 1984 dedicates this yearbook to Dr. Norman Schlessberg.

In Memoriam



Throughout our years at Yeshiva University, we the students, have been blessed with many new additions. Among them are the Max Stern Athletic Center and the Sy Syms Marketing Chair. Unfortunately, we have also been hit by many losses which no donation from a philanthropist can replace. These losses are not financial ones but rather those of great human beings. However, each one of these persons has left us a great legacy for which he will be fondly remembered in our hearts.

Rabbi Morris J. Besdin, z'tl, directed the James Striar School of General Jewish Studies for twenty-five years. That number itself is quite impressive but Rabbi Besdin accomplished a far greater amount than just the accumulation of statistical data. Rabbi Besdin not only formulated high academic standards in developing his JSS program, but also felt personally responsible for each and every student, thus combining two often contrary characteristics in his job as mentor. Soft-spoken in manner, his personality created a popularity unparalleled among students, alumni, and colleagues throughout the University. Rabbi Besdin's contribution, not only to Yeshiva University, but also to all of Klal Yisrael, will secure an honored place for him among the giants of Jewish Education.

Rabbi Jeruchem Gorelick, z'tl, was also affiliated with RIETS for forty years, until his ill-fated passing. Rabbi Gorelick studied in Poland at the Yeshiva of Radun, which had been founded by the Chafetz Chaim, and later studied under Rabbi Chaim Ozer Grodzinsky, the leading Posek in pre-war Poland and Lithuania. When he arrived in the United States, Rabbi Gorelick served as spiritual leader of Congregation Binai Israel, in the West Bronx, as well as teaching at numerous yeshivot in the Metropolitan Area. His years at Yeshiva University were just as fruitful and his position as Rosh Yeshiva will never be completely replenished.

Rabbi Aaron Shatzkes, z'tl, was a member of the RIETS faculty for forty years. Rabbi Shatzkes was a descendant of a great Talmudic family, among them Rabbi Abraham Aaron Shatzkes, the renowned spiritual leader of Vilna, Lithuania, and Rabbi Moses Shatzkes, the famous "Lomza Rav." Our own Rav Shatzkes continued that great Talmud tradition which can be attested to by the vast amount of knowledge his talmidim took with them from his shiur room. Rav Shatzkes' presence will be sorely missed.

Emil Greenberg

THE SUMMER OF '31

It was more than fifty years ago, when our world and we were young. Betty and I were newly-weds and the bloom was yet upon us. We had rented a small bungalow for the summer of '31 at White Lake in the Catskills, which to us were the mountains. To blase others they were more like molehills, but we made mountains out of such molehills and a glamorous villa out of our modest bungalow.

During that summer of our content, we wanted so much to share the embrace of our newly-started family. We let my youngest brother Herb know that we would visit with him at his nearby camp where he was a counselor. Herb was then nineteen, six years my junior.

As we approached the camp's entrance, Herb strode forward to greet us, tanned golden and so like an Indian brave in his mocassins and brief shorts. We strolled with him through those fields, so fragrant with summer's warm redolence, with nature's unsullied odors of grass, and dandelions, and wildflowers, and earth-creatures, and he sang out in harmony with the field-sounds and murmurings. His young baritone rang through the high grass and echoed from the hillocks. As he joyfully sang forth with "Indian Love Call," with its so relevant, "You belong to me, I belong to you," and then invited all within his call, "Come with me where moonbeams light Tahitian skies," Betty and I turned to each other and with smiling eyes wordlessly conveyed that rapport and pervading heart-warmth we felt with him and for him, embracing him tightly within our freshly-formed family circle, The Clan Greenberg.

To recite exact instances of his quick intelligence and quintessential goodness, leavened by his effervescent humor and by-play, is not easy to bring to recall, now that a half-century has added its increment of irrelevancies. However, I do recall how, even then, as a student at Yeshiva University when it moved to Washington Heights, he founded and edited its magazine which he named the "Masmid" - "scholar" in Hebrew, - which it is still called.

He was writing his inimitable poetry even then, so much of which was subsequently published in 1948 in his "Ur of the Chaldees and Other Poems." He never stopped writing and teaching and learning and he later returned to Yeshiva University for his Doctor of Philosophy degree in Education, his thesis, "Ethno-centric Patterns Among Certain Jewish Writers."

How often have I quoted his concluding poem! He called it "Legacy" - which it is for me: "When the fitted rhyme/And the fashioned thought/Will break in time/Like a vessel wrought,/ May Eternity preserve in mine/Their Hunger, and erode the line."/

To attempt to pinpoint specifics of his sparkle and wit so many decades later would be self-defeating. As Mary Antin had commented so many years earlier with regard to book reviews: "It is like taking quivering butterflies, and pinning them as dried specimens." However, I still dip into his poems, into that well of vivid verse, and draw refreshing draughts from its ever-clear waters - such as these cinquains:

"Widow: Darkness/Rimmed her cupped soul/And in her aching arms/Only the frosty emptiness /Of dawn.

"Credo: He lit/Sacramental/Candles upon altars/Of the Unknown, to pierce the void/With Faith."

What makes that fleeting moment in time in those Catskill fields so poignant, is that both that moment in time and Herb my brother, are gone - memories among my memories.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

TO THE YESHIVA COLLEGE CLASS OF 1984:

I congratulate you on the successful completion of your college careers, conducted in the spirit of Torah U-madda. If taken seriously, the dual program is an onerous one, and its mastery is deserving of felicitations by your family, friends, and especially faculty.

The times we live in are critical enough, even without the ominous overtones of George Orwell's famous novel which lends this calendar year such unhappy literary distinction. They will require of you not only technical and professional knowledge, but also wisdom, insight, and a finely honed spiritual intuition. We hope that you attained the beginnings of the former in your Yeshiva College classes, and that you took the first steps towards the latter in your Torah studies.

May your own growth in both areas give you the intellectual, personal, and spiritual wherewithal to confront the great issues of your generation and master them in a way that will contribute le'hagdil Torah u-le'haadirah.

Cordially yours,

NORMAN LAMM

My dear graduating Seniors:

The original charge given to Abraham at the dawn of our history, and which, I also believe, is especially appropriate to take with you as you complete Yeshiva College, is HaShem's testimony about Abraham, "For I know him that Yetzaveh his children, and his household after him, that they should keep the way of the L-rd to do righteousness and justice." (Genesis 18:19) The word, "Yetzaveh," here has to be fully understood. Usually, we translate it to mean, "will command." However, I believe that it signifies something much more encompassing. At the end of Dvarim (31:14), HaShem commands Moses, when he is coming fast to the end of his days as leader of Israel, to call Joshua, and He says, "Va'atzavehnu." Rashi understands this to mean, "And I will exhort him." The Ramban, however, understood, "Va'atzavehnu," to mean, "And I shall make him a "Metzaveh," a commander.

If we have succeeded here at Yeshiva to put you on your way, which is His way, to keep The Law, and to do righteousness and justice, we have, no doubt, done what is our mission. However, only part of our mission, because we understand "Yitzaveh" to mean not only to command, but to make commanders, authentic and inspired leaders of our People, here, in Israel, and everywhere, whatever your vocation.

I pray that HaShem bless you all with life and success in all your endeavors, and that you all meet up to the expectations of "Va'atzavenu."

Sincerely yours,

Dear Graduate,

The editors of last year's Masmid, in an inspired piece of writing, noted that "a graduating class looks back and looks ahead, but most of all, it looks beyond."

Our Jewish Studies schools, programs and faculties have striven, throughout your stay, to provide you with the skills and insight which will enable you to look not only beyond, but also within.

The text and its analysis, the event and its larger significance, the quote and its commentary -- these have been constant companions for four years. We hope they will always be with you to enrich your lives and remind you that life has meaning beyond mere existence and that the blueprint for what is, and what lies within, is eternal Torah!

May the blessings of ages envelope you and yours, always.

Dear Graduates:

You have successfully completed your studies at Yeshiva College. This is more than a personal achievement. As members of our fifty-third graduating class, you share with your classmates and more than a half-century of alumni a commitment to the Yeshiva University ideal of Torah u'Madda.

This commitment has required an enormous investment of time and energy. You have chosen to involve yourselves in a rigorous dual program, each component of which is in itself demanding of full time attention. You have accepted the challenge of integrating your Torah studies with what is best in Western civilization and culture.

Your success in meeting this challenge and realizing the University ideal will be reflected in your lives and careers. You are fortunate in having as models those graduates of the past fifty years who have demonstrated in their lives and careers that this challenge can be met successfully and that the Torah u'Madda ideal retains its freshness and vitality.

Therefore, as you leave Yeshiva College, I congratulate you, I wish you well, and I urge you to bear in mind that you will be the models for future Yeshiva College men.

Sincerely,

Norman S. Rosenfeld

The Torah uses different characteristics to describe the artisans that built the Mishkan. Among these traits is that of Chachem-Lev - possessing wisdom of the heart (Shemos-31:6). One can understand, argues the Aznaim LaTorah that such individuals might be used to construct the Mishkan, but why were they necessary to produce and manufacture the Bigdei Kehuna? Afterall, expert tailors, weavers and craftsmen would be most capable, why did they need to be Chachmei Lev?

Rav Zalman Sorotzkin Z"TL, suggests a fascinating answer. The entire sanctuary was embued with the holiness of the Shechina and thus whatever was made for and incorporated as part of the Mishkan, assumed this special characteristic of holiness. However, the special garments were utilized not only in the Mikdash, but outside its boundaries as well, as in the time of warfare when the High Priest was consulted and the Urim V'Tumim were utilized on the battlefield away from the source of holiness. To retain a sense of Kedusha away from its source is much more difficult and, therefore, these garments needed to be created by individuals possessing, not only proficiency in tailoring, but men of wisdom and vision.

The graduating senior class of our Yeshiva is faced with no less a challenge; to transport and create Kedusha in areas, ventures, careers and communities where often it is lacking. To facilitate this noble and difficult task, I pray that you, too, will prove to be Chachmei-Lev; employing both wisdom and sentiment, the letter of the law, as well as its spirit, the din and lefnim meshuras hadin.

Finally, as the Kohen of old, who though stationed away from the Mishkan, realized ultimately from where his strength and Kedusha eminated, may you retain close ties of kinship and support with your Yeshiva, Rabbeim and Chaverim, therefore enabling you to regenerate the special spirit of Kedusha that has been implated within you.

Warmest personal wishes to all the graduates for success in all your endeavors.

TO ALL STUDENTS

In order to prevent the hazardous, indecent and immature practice of objects and water being thrown from the windows of the Residence Halls, the University Administration is informing all students that the decision enforced last year will be enforced this year as well.

Any student involved in this dangerous practice will be immediately suspended from the dormitory. This suspension will be in force for the entire time that the student is in the school.

If the student is a senior or is leaving Yeshiva, we will notify the Graduate School or the College to which he is transferring that such disciplinary action has been taken.

Please do not force us to take these serious steps to prevent a Chilul Hashem.

Uptown Kaplan Branch Under Consideration

By MORDECHAI TWERSKY

Yeshiva University officials, concerned that students preparing for graduate entrance examinations are missing much of their classes, particularly in Judaic Studies, are considering a proposal to open a branch of the Stanley H. Kaplan Educational Center at the Main Center in Washington Heights, the Commentator has learned.

The proposal, one of the several that are being discussed by a committee of Administration officials and Roshei Yeshiva, would attempt to put students back into classrooms again, while enabling them to prepare adequately for the MCAT, LSAT, and GMAT examinations.

Eliminates Transportation Problem

According to Rabbi Zevulun Charlop, director of the Mazer Yeshiva Program and chairman of the committee, implementation of such a proposal would also "eliminate the transportation problem students have been confronted with en route to Kaplan's," which is located in Midtown.

Rabbi Charlop has announced that the Mazer Yeshiva Program will undergo major changes in Shiur level and Structure, Page 4.

"The excessive preparation for the college boards is all-consuming," Rabbi Charlop said, "and it has taken away a great deal of time from the students' Judaic Studies."

Rabbi Charlop added that each of the three Judaic Studies divisions at the college have been affected by this problem. He indicated though, that the Mazer Yeshiva Program-which consists of over 60% of the student body-"has been most severely hurt."

Special Class

Another proposal being considered by the committee is to establish a special Judaic Studies class for students in their junior year preparing for the graduate entrance exams. Under this proposal, students would attend the class at times specially designated.

While several of the committee members have indicated in interviews with the Commentator that the Kaplan proposal may have its "positive aspects," many expressed the need to consider the plan with "cautious optimism."

Conditions

Dr. Norman Rosenfeld, dean of Yeshiva College, maintained that

Mr. Stanley H. Kaplan
He may have a reason to smile.

he would support the proposal on the condition that it "would not interfere with the programs of Yeshiva College and the Judaic Studies Divisions."

The dean insisted that although the proposal would be helpful in solving the transportation problem, he would not support "any modification of the existing college programs.

"Coming to Grips"

According to Dr. Michael Hecht, associate dean of Yeshiva College and director of the student guidance center, the Kaplan proposal "is an attempt to come to grips with the existing problem by accomodating the needs of the students and enabling them to fulfill their obligations.

YU To Launch Campus Renovation Project

By a Special Commentator Correspondent

Yeshiva University's Main Center in Washington Heights will be the initial focus of a major program to improve its facilities and outward appearance, the Commentator has learned.

The Centenial Renovation and Rehabilitation Project, which will include university-wide improvements of buildings and facilities, will make the campuses "a more functional and more attractive place to work and to study," said one administration offical.

According to Dr. Sheldon E. Socol, Vice President for Business Affairs of Yeshiva University, work has already begun on two of the Main Center's buildings, including the Mendel Gottesman Library and Science Hall. He also indicated that test borings are presently being conducted in preparation for the construction of the Max Stern Athletic Center this fall.

Plans for the Main Center

Further plans for renovation at the Main Center include Rubin Hall, which would receive a major facelift, the addition of a furnished "visitor's suite," and a fresh coat of paint. Lounges and common areas would be refurbished, and bath and shower areas would be rehabilitated. Some of the same improvements, including the refurbishing of lounges and the repainting of walls, are also proposed for Morgenstern Hall.

Under the plan, the renovation of Science Hall would include the installation of exterior lighting, the creation of additional faculty offices, and other improvements to ensure better energy conservation. Work at Furst Hall would include the refurbishing of the lobby and lounges, the rehabilitation of the building's elevator tower, and the relocation of various offices.

The Yeshiva University Campus will receive a major face lift.

Improvements are also planned at Tannenbaum and RIETS Hall, home to The Marsha Stern Talmudical Academy-YU High School for Boys and YU's affiliated Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary, as well as the first building erected by the

and with RIETS. The plan also calls for creation of student lounge facilities, the installation of a new roof, the repainting of the entire building, and rehabilitation of the structure's water and steam supply system.

YCSC . . . Constitutional?

By MARK LEFKOVITZ

Recently, questions have been raised concerning the propriety and legality of certain Yeshiva College Student Council actions.

Earlier this year, a new Y.C.S.C. constitution was drafted by the Student Council in order to update the previous Constitution.

According to Avi Schneider, President of Y.C.S.C., "the old constitution was not accurate and many things in it were not applicable..." "We wanted to make it more of a living document."

The process in which the Constitution was drawn up, however, has given rise to much criticism. According to sources close to Commentator when the Student Council formulated the new draft, they used the old Constitution as a background while they rewrote a new Constitution. Changes were not recorded as ammendments. Instead, the Council wrote up a draft based on the old Constitution and inserted the changes directly into the new text without any record of change.

Some students believe that in deference to the existing document, the changing of a constitution must be effected through the adaption of ammendments. Moreover, they feel that the introduction of changes into the new draft without any record is questionable. Mr. Schneider, on the other hand, points out that most people did not even know that there was a Constitution until last April. "The Constitution was a dead document until it surfaced last April and now a big deal is being made of it." He maintains that the revision of the Constitution was done in a respectful

New Governing Board Chosen; Smilchensky Elected Editor

By JEFF SCHWARTZ

April 27 — At 10:30, the Commentator's governing board began its deliberation for the selection of a new governing board and Editor-in-Chief. Approximately two hours later, it was announced that Ben-Zion Smilchensky, former News and Feature Editor would serve as Editor-in-Chief for the 1983-1984 academic year.

Ben-Zion, a resident of Sheepshead bay in Brooklyn, graduated with honors from the Yeshiva of Flatbush High School. He studied at BMT in Jerusalem for one year and is presently in Y.P. and an Economics major and computer minor heading for Business School.

When asked about his plans for next year Mr. Smilchensky replied,"We intend to further heighten the already high standards of the Commentator,with the added emphasis on quality in-

. . . And there was Light

There's alot of light on Amsterdam Ave.
How often do you get to see G'dolim Ba'Torah walk down the street (1).
It is fortunate to be able to partake in simchot with your Rebbein (2, 3).
So often we take this for granted.
In theory, this Torah U'Mada concept is more precious than gold (4).
Sweeter than honey.
For those treasures that I have excavated, I am grateful.
Ode to the fortress within which (5) we can learn (6), pray (7), and sing (8);
Rejoice, for outside the fortress is the night that we call Galvs.
You can now venture forth armed with the light of Torah and armor of Mada;
Only it is up to you to keep your torch ablaze.
Ultimately, you will enkindle the sparks of others (9).
Sing praises that you are privileged enough to see this holy light (10).
Others, not as fortunate, have been lost in the darkness.
Yes, a tree of life is thriving in Washington Heights.

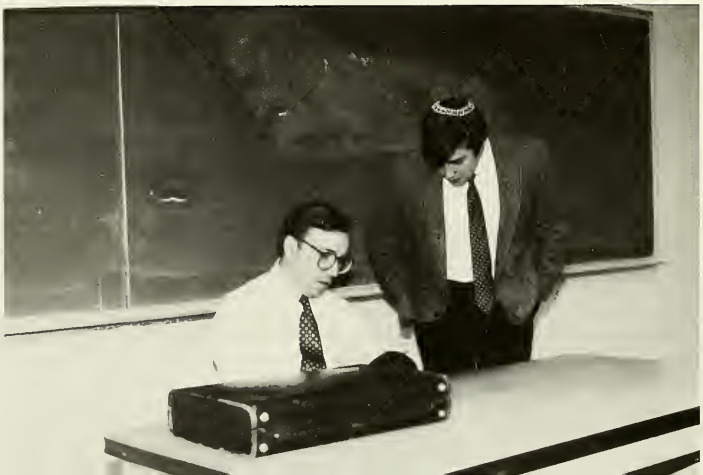
An Admissions Interview at Yeshiva College: The characters in our little scenario are David, a prospective student, and Mr. Goldstein, the interviewer. Mr. Goldstein is entering his office where David is already seated.

Goldstein: Hello David. How are you?
David: Fine, thank you.
G: Get to Y.U. okay?
D: Sure, no problem.
G: Well, David, I'm not going to beat around the bush — I'm going to get straight to business. Did you receive a 'bris?'
D: A what?
G: A bris. You know, circumcision.
D: Uh yeah, sure. When I was eight days old.
G: Excellent! Excellent! I am so happy for you! I think I can convince the Admissions Committee to guarantee a spot for you in next year's class. How does that sound?
D: Well, great!
G: Now let's look at your record. I see you spent two years in Israel . . . Is that correct?
D: Yes.
G: UH-Uh . . . hmmm . . .; I see you earned 100 credits there — all A's.
D: That's right.
G: Excellent! Excellent! David, I think we should have no problem transferring all 100 credits of A to Y.C. Now your transcript only says "Hebrew Studies — 100 credits — A." Now tell me, does this also include 8 Bible credits, Biblical Exegesis, Talmud, Jewish History, and Hebrew 1, 2, 3, and 4?
D: As a matter of fact, Mr. Goldstein, I was just saying the other day to my friend how I indeed took all those courses in Israel.
G: Excellent! Excellent! I think we will have no problem then in exempting you from these courses. Now you didn't happen to take Physics, Chemistry, and Biology at Hebrew University in Israel in those two years?
D: Uh . . . why yes!
G: Splendid! Splendid! Then you will have completed our pre-med major. Provided, of course, that you took A.P. Organic Chemistry and six other credits in Biology in High School.
D: Well, I was planning to take those courses this summer at Oshkosh Community College.
G: Oh, that will be fine. Just fine. Now did you take music and art?

Before



D: I refuse to take those courses on religious grounds.

G: That is perfectly acceptable, David. You may, of course, have to copy something out of Encyclopedia Judaica to support that statement, but in your case, I think we can overlook it.

D: I'd appreciate it.

G: Well, David, looking at your record, I see that by the end of the summer, you will have completed 129 credits, including all of our residency requirements. This is very impressive. Do you have a checkbook on you?

D: Yes.

G: Well, if you just make a check out to Y.U., I think I can send you your diploma in, say, ten business days. How does that sound?

D: Uh, fine, I think.

G: Congratulations, David. You are a Y.U. graduate — and summa cum laude at that. I'm sure your parents are very proud. Now, if you want to be a candidate for valedictorian at next week's graduation ceremonies, just drop your name with Mrs. Goodstein — she's on the 4th floor. Next!!

Dr. B Talks

Students of Dr. Beukas are familiar with the countless stories and anecdotes he relates in his classes. However, most students become confused after hearing so many stories, and the stories seem to overlap and become the same. To rid my fellow students of this problem, I have written some of Dr. Beaukas' stories, and provided a clear, concise interpretation of them.

STORY 1:

"I was invited by the millionaire Greek, Mr. Onasis, to his luxury liner for a party off the coast of Corfu. At the time, I was still a boy. Anyway, I was dangling my feet over the edge of the shuttle boat, when suddenly, a silence fell over the passengers. It was the strangest thing. Then, without warning, I was yanked from my position and thrown to the center of the boat. I immediately noticed a large, grey shark pass the side of the boat at the very spot where I was dangling my feet. I was told by the sailor I had almost lost my feet."

INTERPRETATION

(My mom forced me to go to the family outdoor bar-b-que, one day. I had wanted a tuna fish sandwich. When my aunt O'Nancy brought the sandwich, I lifted the bread and noticed there was not enough mayonnaise, and the tuna looked a little grey. The shock was too much for me, and I fell over backwards into a large puddle.)

STORY 2:

"One time, LIZ . . . Elizabeth Taylor, that is . . . invited me backstage after a show. Of course, I know Liz and Dick personally ever since I worked with them in writing my thesis in Yale Drama School. The first thing Liz said to me was 'Beaukas, so glad you're here!' I was touched. Such a big star, treating me so nicely. Before we could chat further, a swarm of reporters began banging on the door, demanding an audience with Liz. Liz was terrified and pleaded with me to stay with her and do what I could to protect her from the reporters. I obliged, and with a little cleverness, I disarmed and scattered the horde. Liz was so grateful. We later chatted over some coffee that Dick had brought."

INTERPRETATION

(I wanted to see Elizabeth Taylor, and I managed to sneak by the guards to arrive at her dressing room. I walked in and Liz said 'BEAUKAS — Get the hell out of here!' She began sreaming like a maniac. Just before she was about to throw her shoe at me, there was a large pounding at the door — it was the reporters. Liz told me that the least I could do after intruding on her privacy was to somehow get rid of the reporters. I obliged. Liz was grateful, and she allowed me to run across the street and get her some coffee and get out of her sight.)

STORY 3:

"After graduating from Yale Drama School and having been taught by the greatest names in theatre, I decided that the only way to realize my theatrical yearnings was to go to Yeshiva University and teach speech."

INTERPRETATION

(I graduated from Oshkosh Community College, with Farrah Fawcett as Dean. I finished with a 1.5 GPA, and it was either Y.U. or driving a cab.)

STORY 4:

"I walked into the elevator in Furst Hall, and I found myself face to face with Rabbi Soloveichik. Immediately, our eyes locked together, and we established an immediate rapport. The Rabbi's eyes told me that despite our differences in philosophy, behavior and religion, there was somehow a common link between us; a mutual understanding. I was overwhelmed by the man's presence and warmth. I will never forget the look in his eyes."

INTERPRETATION:

(I met the Rav in the elevator. I asked him what floor he wished. He replied, "fifth.")

STORY 5:

". . . and so, in the medieval era, continuing in the Italian Renaissance, we note the important role masks have played in theatre and drama. By the way, archaeologists have found a beautiful porcelain and ivory mask near Greece, that was dated to this period. It is considered priceless, decked with jewels such as diamonds and rubies. I have a mask similar to it in my collection of masks at home. I've been collecting masks for some time now, and I happen to think its pretty damn good."

INTERPRETATION

(When my kids were small, and went trick-or-treating in costumes on Halloween, I would save their masks. I have a really good 'Superman' and an incomparable 'Incredible Hulk' mask. I lost a really cute 'Batman' mask.)

Dear Jeffrey:

In reviewing your record, I was pleased to note that you received a grade of 90 in Rabbi Yankelewitz' shiur last Spring. Your performance then stands, unfortunately, in marked contrast to that of the current semester. Indeed, it appears that you are no longer attending shiur. It is, therefore, imperative that you contact me at once.

To Mr. Goldsmith

Dear Student:

In reviewing our records, I find that your record since transferring to the Yeshiva Program from EMC in Fall 1982 has been poor. You received a failing grade in Rabbi Room's shiur, and your attendance was negligible. As a result, you were placed on probation. Your attendance this semester, unfortunately, remains poor. Please be advised that Yeshiva Program regulations stipulate that a student on probation whose work and attendance remain below an acceptable level can be dropped from the school. I trust this will not be necessary.

I extend my sincerest congratulations to the class of 1984 upon your graduation from Yeshiva College and wish you every success in your future endeavors.

I think it appropriate to reflect upon the nature of our school and the unique responsibility shouldered by its graduates. Our mission is not to prepare young men as surgeons and accountants, lawyers and computer scientists, rabbis and engineers but to produce "bnai Torah" who also happen to be accomplished professionals and businessmen.

I sincerely hope that armed with the eternal tenets of our faith that you will continue to grow from strength to strength all the days of your life.
